Reviewer 1

The study "Egra on Primary School in Serang City Banten; Strategies in Teaching Reading for Early Grade" is a very interesting and novel article. The authors have done a good job with regard to their methodology. They have adopted survey items for their study from previously validated instruments and have contextualized the items to meet the criteria of their study. They have provided a detailed explanation of their analyses. Further, they have done a good job of using appropriate tables and figures. However, much work is required before this manuscript can be published.

- In the introduction section, the authors should explain how the strategies in teaching reading for primary school.
- Further, the authors have to improve their literature review section with a separate section of the theoretical framework.
- The methods section should be stated with separate sub-sections of research design, sampling, and instrument, followed by the data analysis part.

- The discussion section needs to be more detailed, with a clear results statement and explanation based on the existing studies.
- The conclusion section must also include the implications/ benefits of metacognitive strategies. Also, there is a need for some future recommendations based on study findings and literature review.
- The major drawback of this manuscript is the writing style. There are a lot of grammatical errors in the manuscript, which make it very difficult to read and need to be corrected with the help of the native speakers

I believe working on the above-mentioned issues can certainly improve the manuscript.

I recommend a major revision for this manuscript.

Reviewer 2

In this study, the authors discussed the “Eggra on Primary School in Serang City Banten; Strategies in Teaching Reading for Early Grade”. A descriptive research design was adopted to study the strategies in reading comprehension especially in primary school. Since the study was non-experimental, no variables were manipulated, and the data collected was for a single period. The authors concluded their manuscript briefly. With a good explanation of all these factors, there are a few shortcomings in the study which need to be overcome to enhance its effectiveness of this study. These include.

- In the introduction section, it is worth mentioning the study gap and objectives with clear statements. Also, there is a need to add contextual information on the topic in detail for a clear understanding of the audience with the significance of conducting this study.
- The literature review is poorly written. More studies need to be added to support the hypotheses development and argument building. You need to show that the existing studies and their findings were not enough for the study of the subject; therefore, a study was needed.
- The method section must be presented with subheadings and a clear description of the respondents' profiles. Please be specific and cite the reason for selecting the research design.
- The results section needs improvement with a clear statement of the results of the reading assessment.
- The discussion section only contains a summary of the main results without repeating the findings and references previous research that agrees or disagrees with your findings. Do not add any new information.
- The final section, i.e., the conclusion, should summarize the findings and show how the study contributes to the domain of research. Please revise the conclusion as briefly explain the study's effectiveness, implications, limitations, the recommendation for future research, etc.
- Also, to avoid grammatical errors, check English language and syntax errors, spelling, and typos to enhance manuscript quality. Also, the presentation style needs to be aligned with journal requirements.

The paper “Egra on Primary School in Serang City Banten; Strategies in Teaching Reading for Early Grade” has been reviewed again.

The authors made a substantial effort to enhance the quality of the manuscript by addressing all the valuable comments raised by the respected reviewers following their suggestions. Here are a few minor points that should also be addressed before proceeding.

The methods section is still underdeveloped and needs to be improved by providing the source of the instruments adopted to develop a questionnaire.

The discussion section also needs more work to be done in terms of explanation based on the existing studies.
