Dear Jiaqi,

The APC for the journal /Eng /only covers papers that need regular English editing, but this paper is in need of extensive work. I want to let you know that I intend to send it back to the authors requesting they improve the English, unless they are board members?

I will cancel the current request for English editing in SuSy, then when the authors return the revised paper you can re-submit the paper in SuSy for a last check. The email below will be sent to the authors when I hear back from you.

Please can you check if this new journal has been classified in a journal section as this is the only way that papers can be auto-assigned to English editors.

Thanks in advance,

Sara

Dear Dr.

We started the English editing of this manuscript, but it was found that extensive English changes will be needed before publication which are not covered in the Article Processing Charge (APC). Please find the manuscript attached showing changes to the first couple of pages for your information. Perhaps you could ask a colleague to make some improvements to the whole document or you could make use of a professional English editing service.

MDPI can offer to do this for you charging on a per-word basis. Our service includes checking grammar, spelling, punctuation and some improvement of style where necessary, in compliance with the MDPI and/or ACS guidelines. It does not include checking the content, correct use of technical terms or changing the overall manuscript structure. If you wish us to proceed with English editing, could you submit the attached manuscript via <http://www.mdpi.com/authors/english> to receive a quote. Payment of this service would need to be made in advance.

When your paper has been revised throughout, please email it to the editorial office to process further.

If you have any questions please do not hesitate to contact me or the editorial office.

With best wishes,

Sara Faes
