Title:
Analysis and Evaluation of the Political Implementation of Land Against Sustainable Food Security in Indonesia (Islamic Economic Approach)

Authors:
Hady Sutjipto and Tubagus Ismail

Institutions:
University of Sultan Ageng Tirtayasa

Content:
This study aims to analyze and critically evaluate the land policy for food security in Indonesia. This study explains descriptively about the implementation of the management of the policy now practiced in Indonesia. The method used in descriptive and quantitative approaches describes critically evaluating the implementation of land policy in Indonesia in the approach of Islamic Economics. This study uses secondary data derived from books, literature, journal articles and other information related to land policy. The results of the study show that Indonesian land politics are not carried out in accordance with Islamic economics. The fact also shows that the management of agricultural land is still a lot in the form of unproductive and abandoned agricultural land and land and this endangers Indonesias food security. As a result, farmers continue to suffer losses and dependence on food from abroad. This study suggests that the government in reforming the Agrarian Law implements land politics in the Islamic economy to achieve sustainable food security in Indonesia.
